

Jürgen Hell

Jürgen Hell has international experience with issues involving leadership, team development and organisational change. As a consultant, he provides support to management boards and teams in dealing with changes. He is in his element when acting as a facilitator and coach for the top team in plotting out a new course and developing individuals and the necessary cultural/behavioural change.

Jürgen began his career in 1991 with his own training agency, specialising in teambuilding and action learning. Five years later, he transferred this agency to the HSK Group, where he became head of the organisational interventions department. In 1998, he made the switch to Schnitker & Voortman to manage the psychology assessment group. Following the takeover by Mercer in 2002, he was given the opportunity to gain experience as an international consultant. But, in the end, he ultimately chose an independent career, first with his own label and later under the flag of YSC, a worldwide leadership consultancy firm. In 2015, Jürgen became a member of Volta Executive Consultants.

He has written various articles on organisational psychology and four books: 'Coaching: Houvast in de veranderende organisatie', 'Gezond verzuimmanagement', 'Werkstress meten: methoden, mogelijkheden en moeilijkheden' and 'Omgaan met macht'. He was the editor-in-chief of the 'Competent Managing' series published by Academic Science, with each of the 17 publications focusing on a specific leadership competency.

Jürgen graduated from Radboud University Nijmegen, first with a degree in Clinical Psychology and afterwards in Work and Organisational Psychology. He is a mediator and qualified Birkman, Hogan, Firo-B and MBTI consultant. In spite of these handicaps, he recently earned his second Dan in Judo and is an enthusiastic Judo instructor.
